

This is a story about Doctor Proctor who was a children's doctor, also known as a pediatrician.

Doctor Proctor had been a doctor for many years and was a good physician.

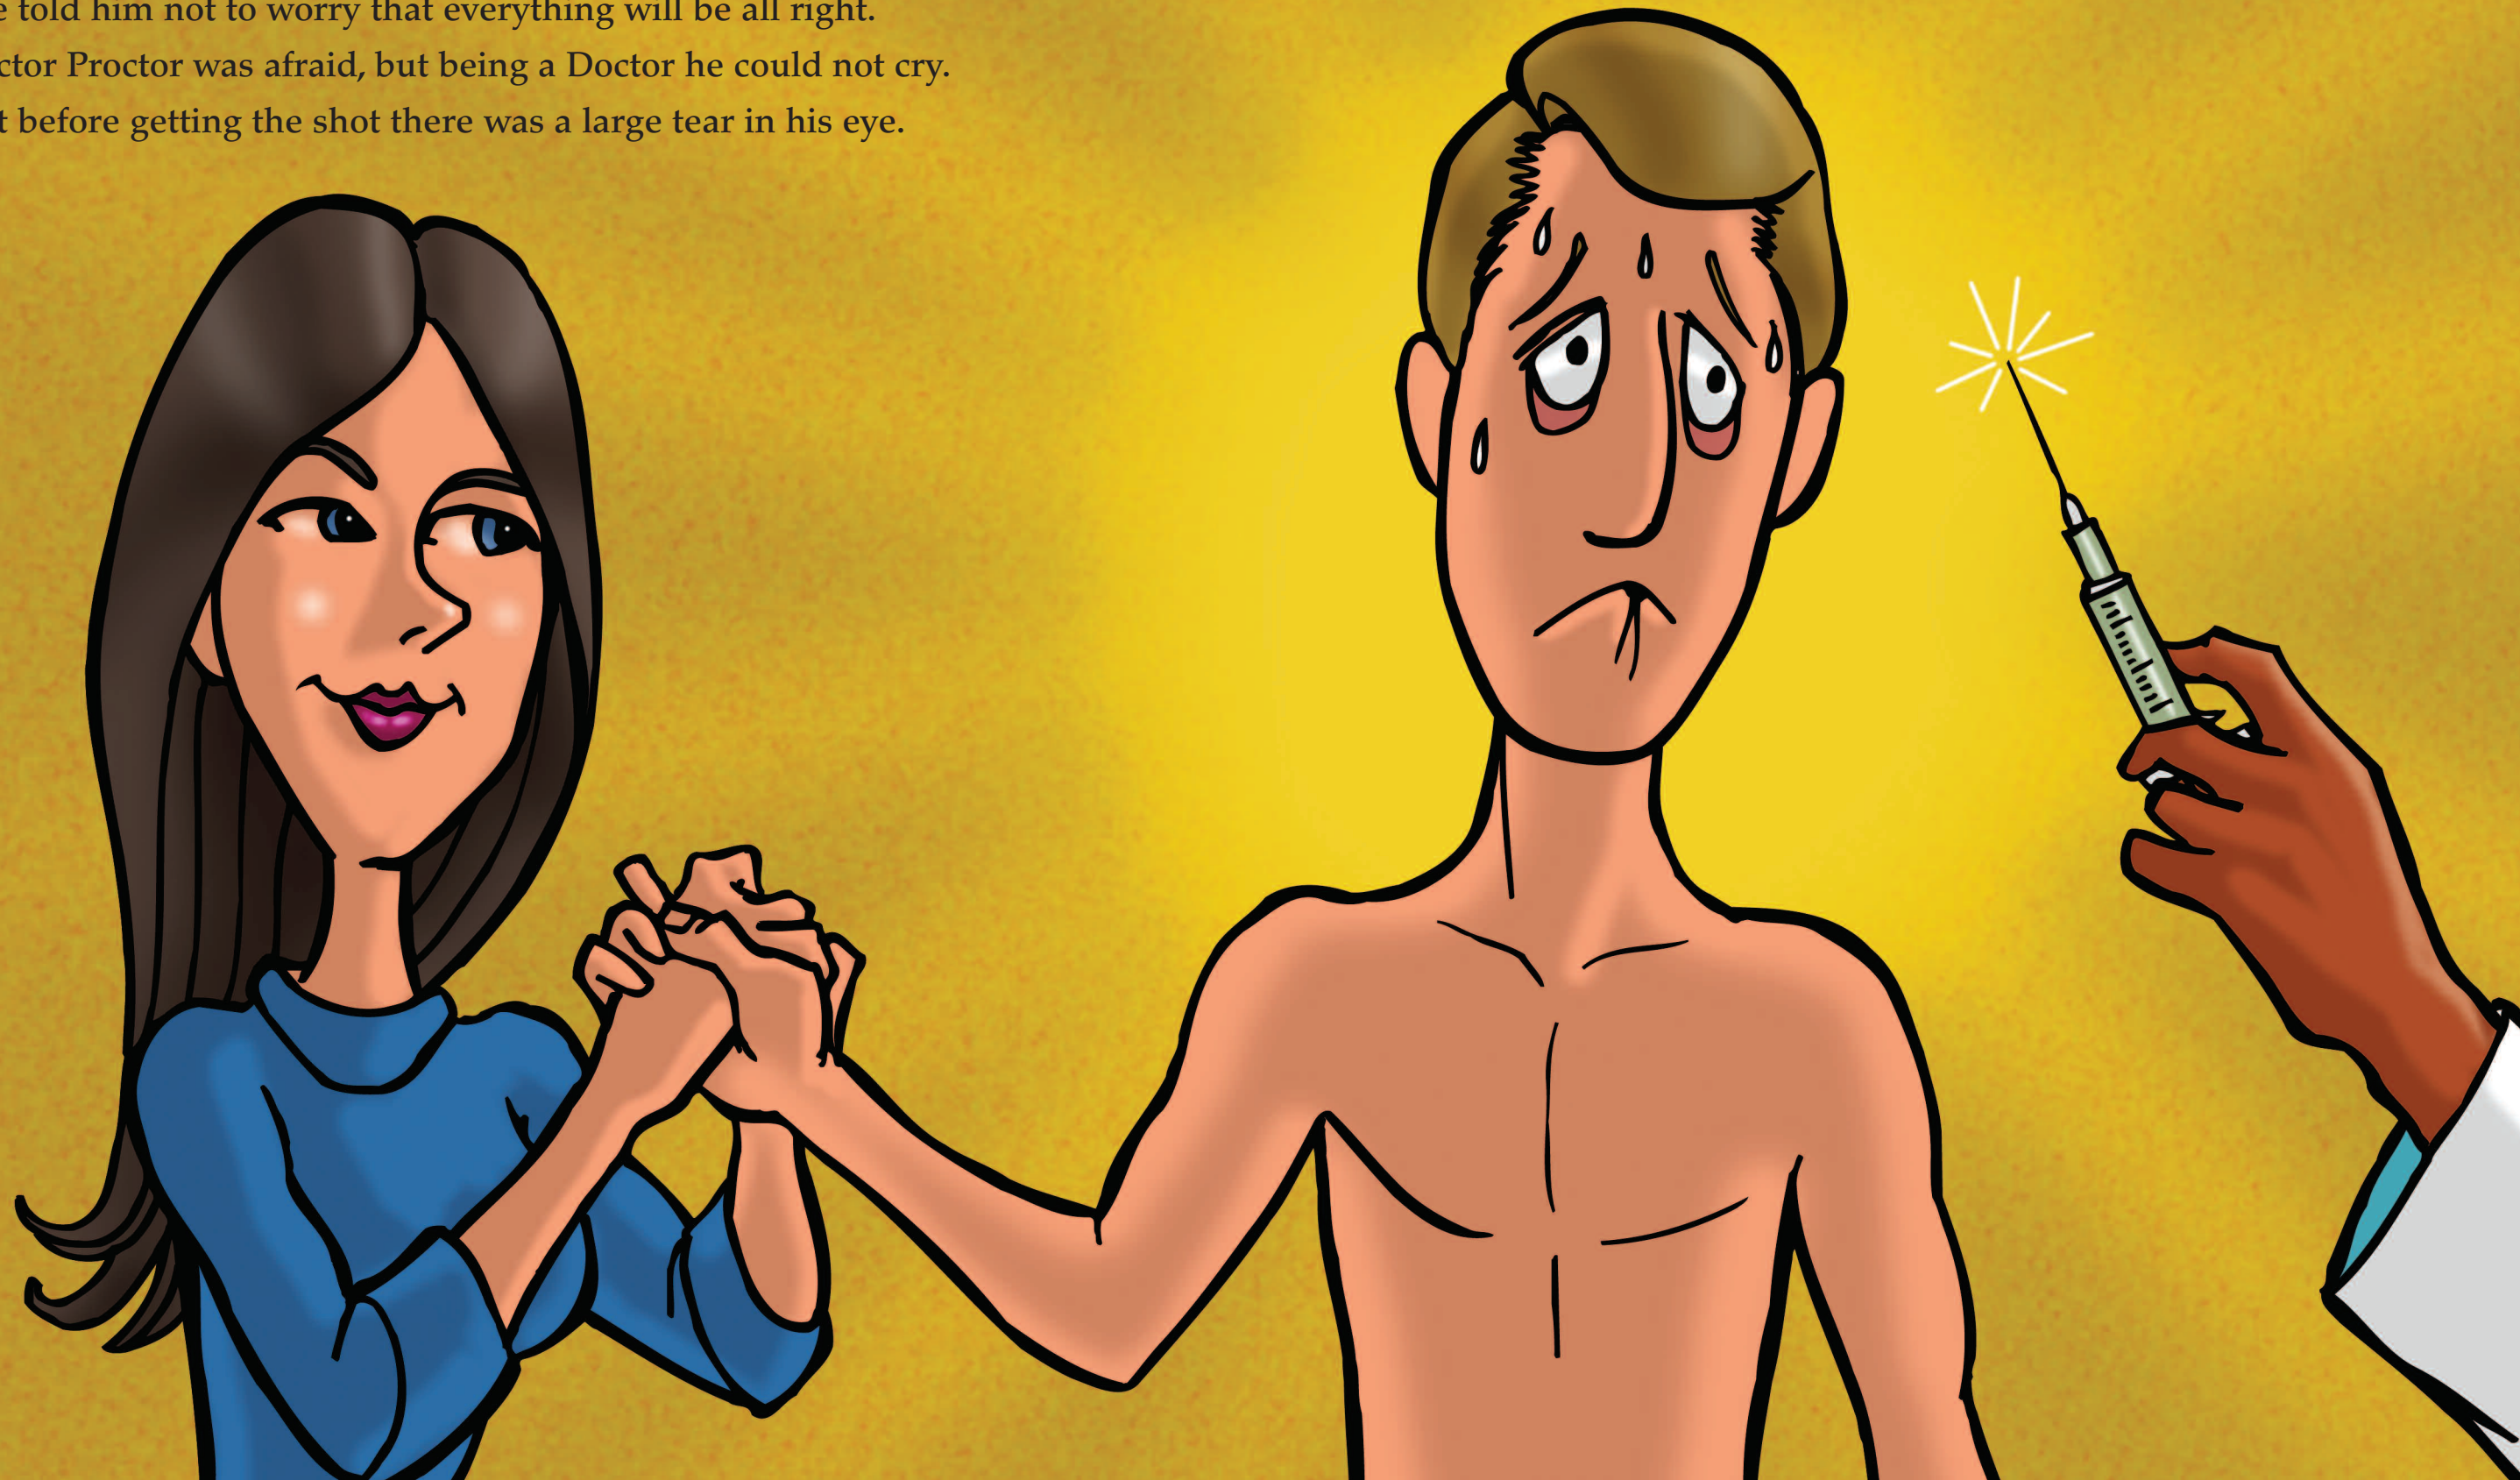

You wouldn't think a doctor would be so scared of getting a shot.

Thinking about getting one, made Doctor Proctor's blood pressure rise which made him hot.

Doctor Proctor's girlfriend sat next to him and held his hand tight.
She told him not to worry that everything will be all right.
Doctor Proctor was afraid, but being a Doctor he could not cry.
Just before getting the shot there was a large tear in his eye.

The shot was not as painful as he thought it might be.

One reason is that the needles used today are a higher quality.

Doctor Proctor was worried about how much it would hurt before he got the shot.

He suffered unnecessarily because he only felt a little pinch which didn't hurt a lot.

This is also a story about Kimberly Prentice who recently became a dentist.

Before Doctor Prentice became a dentist she had been a dental apprentice.

Doctor Prentice was also secretly terrified of getting a shot.

She claimed she wasn't scared about getting an injection, but was worried about getting an infection.
