

This is a story about a 3 year old girl named Dottie.
Dottie still wore diapers and did not yet have a potty.
Whenever Dottie made a poop her face would turn bright red.
She made her poop in her room somewhere by her bed.

Dottie was told that pee-pee was number one and cocky number two.

Is that the same thing that your mommy or your daddy told you?

One Saturday, Dottie's daddy brought home a new red and white potty for Dottie.

From that moment on everybody knew Dottie had her very own potty.

The following week Dottie's real potty training began.

Sitting on the potty for 5 to 10 minutes several times a day was the plan.

Temporarily not wearing diapers or pull-ups, except when going to bed at night.

Being potty trained doesn't always happen very quickly even if the child is very bright.

Dottie's mommy lets Dottie keep her company in the bathroom, setting a good example for Dottie.

Dottie sees everything her mommy does as her mommy sits on her own grown-up potty.

Dottie loves to flush her mommy's toilet and then look into the bowl and stare.

She would throw little pieces of toilet Paper into the bowl and watch them disappear.
